FICTIONAL TRAINING REFERENCE – NOT A REAL JUDGMENT

Judgment A – Supplied Reference

Case: Alpha Traders v. Tax Authority (Fictional)

Issue

Whether input tax credit could be denied solely because the supplier's registration was cancelled after the relevant invoices and transactions occurred.

Key reasoning

The fictional reference states that the timing of the supplier's cancellation should be considered alongside evidence of the underlying transaction. It emphasizes examining whether the purchaser can demonstrate the transaction, receipt of goods and payment through available records.

Position / outcome

On the facts supplied in this fictional reference, the credit was not treated as automatically invalid solely because cancellation occurred after the transaction period. The reference stressed review of supporting evidence.

Training caution

This is a fictional teaching reference created for prompt-comparison practice. It is not a legal authority and must not be cited in real work.