TRAINER ANSWER KEY

Lab 3 – Research & Draft a Tax Response

Use after participants attempt the exercise.

Expected legal-issue framing

The fictional SCN raises a question about the taxpayer's input tax credit claim where the supplier's registration was cancelled effective 01 October 2022 and the invoices are dated July–September 2022. The exercise is intentionally designed so that participants compare the supplied references rather than assume a legal conclusion.

Judgment comparison

Judgment A emphasizes that post-transaction cancellation alone does not automatically resolve the issue and highlights transaction evidence. Judgment B places stronger emphasis on documentary evidence and states that insufficient evidence can prevent the claim from being sustained. Both references emphasize evidence; their emphasis differs.

Client-supporting facts

Invoices pre-date cancellation; payments were through bank transfer; e-way bills and goods receipt notes are available.

Open item

GSTR-2B appearance is not confirmed. This should remain a [TO VERIFY] item.

Drafting expectation

The first draft should use cautious language, distinguish the notice allegation from the client's facts, avoid inventing legal authorities, and include placeholders such as [TO VERIFY] where information is incomplete.
